Here's what Gregg will share with you: We live a time of extremes from a collapsing economy and a global pandemic, to issues that divide our families, communities and our nation, beliefs that divide us are a reflection of how we are taught to think about ourselves and our world. The bitter nature of our differences is a clear indication that we need new ways to see ourselves and our most cherished relationships. New discoveries ranging from human evolution and genetics to the new science of neuro-cardiology (the bridge between brain and heart) reveal a new human story that turns 150 years of thinking when it comes to us, our origins, and our potential. The science is clear. Inside each of us lies the extraordinary potential to thrive amidst the fear and adversity that the world's world today has is a potential that catapults us far beyond what was thought possible in the past. It is an undeniable fact that leads to an even deeper mystery: How do we awaken this potential in our daily lives? Join five-time New York Times bestselling author, scientist, and 2020 Templeton Award nominee Gregg Brayden on this multi-sensory journey to discover the power of a new human story in your life! Gregg Brayden Official Introduction to Wisdom Codes - Loss Code 9 Please enjoy this bonus gift, episode 1 of my Gaia series, Missing Links. Cycles of time from missing ties with Gregg Braden Humanity is set to face a rare convergence of three massive cycles of change. In this first episode, Gregg Braden guides us through the evidence that charts the simultaneous peak of economic, human conflict and solar cycles. The rise and fall in each of these cycles has serious implications for our civilization. As all three cycles begin to peak, a new story about humanity emerges. In order to understand how this story will unfold, we must first honestly look at who we really are and where we came from. We live in a time when we can expect big things to happen-big shifts in the world and big changes in our lives. I'm sure you can feel it. We live in extremes. And to be clear, the extremes I'm talking about don't have to be just bad things. And they don't even have to be good things, for that matter. It's just important to understand that they are great things. And these big things are happening around us. We live in a rare era of transition, but the success of our transition depends on: Our willingness to recognize shifts and our ability to accept them in a healthy way. (The key to adopting shifts in a healthy way of radical sustainability is the theme of my last course In our globalized world of jobs, money, markets and resources, it is now impossible to separate extremes in our world from what they mean for everyday life. From the growing levels of social unrest and climate change to the instability in the global economy and the stress it creates, these are the changes that bring uncertainty to our lives. Among the many uncertainties they bring, however, there is one thing in which we can be sure: our lives are changing in ways that we are not used to, unprepared, at a speed we never knew. I'm an optimist by nature. I see real reasons for optimism in our lives. At the same time, I'm also a realist. I am under no illusions when it comes to the huge amount of work that is required to find our way into the new world that lies before us. I know it's to cope alone. So, I have developed a radical resilience to support you in finding your way through these extremes and thrive in a new new World. This course was created to empower you by giving you the tools to successfully solve the problems that converge in our lives. Before I leave, I would leave you with a couple of questions to consider in our rapidly changing world - How do you currently deal with these drastic changes? Want to have a different experience? Because your answers are the key to understanding your current level of resilience in these times of extremes.
